Value of "Total Immersion" - Total immersion in language learning is the situation where the learner spends time in an environment operating solely in the target language. In this way the learner is completely surrounded by the target language, this being defined as the language that the learner wants to learn. For people who want to learn as much English as possible within a short period of time, the concept of "total immersion" has some value. While this is a drastic program for people who don't speak English, it is actually a rather easy way to learn English. Basically what occurs is that non-English speaking people are taken to a resort or other place where they can stay where English is the only language used and their native language is not spoken. They are totally immersed into the food, the language, the customs, and even the hand gestures that are used. This is often a method that is used by business personnel, professionals, and even executives to learn the English language. The value of this method of learning English is that failure is not an option and participants are essentially forced to learn to speak the language to some degree. One of the benefits of such a strategy is that one sees and feels the language in its natural environment, and the learner sees, hears, feels and 'lives the language', seeing expressions, words and phrases in context, complete with the physical movements, facial expressions, hand motions and tone of voice.

Practicing Online - One of the many easy ways to learn English is to practice online. While there are a variety of great websites online that will allow you to learn and practice English, something as simple as getting involved in English forums or writing to email pals that speak the language is good practice as well.
